Exploring Rome is concerned with those Italian, French, and English eighteenth-century artists, architects, collectors, patrons, and antiquarians who created and spread a new vision of antiquity that led to the establishment of neoclassism. The critical figure in this activity was the etcher and architect Giovanni Battista Piranesi, who settled in Rome in Exploring Rome: Piranesi and His Contemporaries is concerned with eighteenth-century artists, collectors, and antiquarians who, through their studies and explorations in Rome, created and spread a new vision of antiquity. Examines the response to Rome by 18th-century Italian, French, and British artists. The focal point is a group of approximately 40 drawings and prints by Giovanni Battista Piranesi (), whose Read more.
